>"Are we there yet?"

"No."

...

"Are we there yet?"

"No.."

...

"Are we there yet now?!"

"No Star, we literally left the house an hour ago. Oregon is a 10 hour drive. And we haven't even gotten on the bus yet." The boy with floppy brown hair sighed, his voice on the brink of annoyance. A woman peaked around to peer at him from the front seat.

"Go easy on her Marco. This is her first road trip." she smiled at him. He gave her a wry smile back as the said girl excitedly bounced in her seat. Blonde hair whipped in Marco's face as she turned to look out the window.

"Star, settle down." He grumbled, flicking blond strands out of his eyes.

"Sorry." She smiled, "I'm just so excited right now!"

"When aren't you excited?" he said, rolling his eyes. In spite of his annoyance a small smile crept on his face. She sure was cute when she was excited...

"MARCO!" Cute, but annoying.

"Star indoor voice." He commanded.

"Oops sorry," she offered an apologetic grin, "But we're here!" Already? Huh, he must have entered a sort of trance. He felt a breeze as the backseat door slid open and Star hopped out, grabbing the brightly colored bag by her feet and the small star shaped bag that had been sitting next to her. Marco too got out and headed to the trunk where his own duffel was waiting.

"Marco, Star honey, do you have everything? Bags? Bus tickets? Phone?" Angie Diaz asked.

"Got it Mom."

"Got it Mrs. Diaz!"

Angie smiled.

"All, well now that that's settled your father and I have a surprise for you!" She grinned as she put her arm around her husband.

"What?" Marco asked, absentmindedly keeping an eye on Star(who was fascinated by the buses) and checking his watch. "Hey you should probably tell us on the bus..." his voice trailed off when he noticed his parent's lack of bags "hey, aren't you getting on?"

"That's the surprise! We aren't going with you!" His mother squealed.

"Surprise!" His father grinned.

"Wait, not going with us? Where are we supposed to stay?! By ourselves?!" Marco began to panic.

"No mi hijo! That's the second part of the surprise. You'll be staying with your tio!" His father exclaimed.

"Tio? Dad I don't have an uncle, just mom's sisters." Marco said in confusion.

"No you have an uncle, we've ah just never mentioned him. He's not too fond of the rest of the family. He put some distance." His mom added.

"Ay," his father agreed, "However on our yearly call I mentioned Star and he seemed very interested in meeting royalty, especially when he heard she was around his daughter's age."

"Daughter? I have a cousin too?"

"I know this will be different mi hijo but try to have fun! You may like your cousin and aunt and uncle. At the least you can meet them." His mom chirped, catching sight of her son's face.

"Well, I guess I'll try." He mumbled. _Even though they say he doesn't like Dad. _He thought.

"That's the spirit!" His dad was clearly relieved.

"Now go get Star and board your bus." His mom said, giving him a quick hug.

"Alright come on Star...Star?"

>After collecting Star, who had been mesmerized by the bus doors, and several goodbyes later, Marco and Star finally boarded their bus.

"Marco how long will we be riding on the car with magic doors?"

"Ten hours Star." he sighed.

"That sound like a long time." She said thoughtfully, chewing on her nails.

"It is. Oh wait I got you something for our trip." he said.

"You got me a present?" She shrieked.

Reaching into the duffel bag by his feet Marco pulled out something small and blue.

"Here" he said dropping it into Star's hands. Her eyes went wide as she began examining the device in her hands.

"It's an iPod like mine. You know the thing that plays music?" Star gasped.

"You mean you got one for me too?" She squealed and did her best to hug Marco from her sitting position. "Thank you Marco!"

"Here these go with it." Marco plugged in a pair of white earbuds and hit the power button.

"There's a full battery, songs, and a few of the movies you like on there so now you won't be bored." Star squealed again and Marco smiled before putting on his own headphones. Big and red unlike the white generic ones. Turning his own iPod on he closed his eyes preparing for the long drive ahead. Before his song started he heard the bus driver call out:

"Next stop, Gravity Falls!"
